The snail  leaves a trail when it rains.

Why is it that it rains? To gain water, I say.

I hang the mail  with a nail.

The painter paints a train in Spain.

The train is on the railway.

I am afraid the stain on the chain  will have to wait.

When it hails, the grain   fails to grow.

I laid my nail  on a zebra's tail.

I wait with my hands on my  waist to see the sail,  but all is in vain.

There are some chains in this plain jail.

I aim to gain the best in the my tests.

Boiling Point

Can you boil some water for me? I need it to brush  away germs from the toilet.

Can you stop that noise! Here have a coin.

Do not point  at us. We are not the ones that spoil the fun. That noisy boy  who is boiling  the water cut off the coil.

Lower your voice and do not add it to the noise.

The boiler cannot boil unless there is a coil in the joint, but we can boil the water in some foil.

I think that is a funny point.

Afloat we go...

Let's load the coach  with poached eggs, a loaf  and some oats.  Then we can go for a picnic along the coast.

Do not forget to bring the  cloak and some roast pork  to fill the toast. We need some coal  to have some toast and don't forget to bring the  soap.

Do not moan and do not groan.  Here, soak your throat  and float along. Do not croak like an old toad.

 There is a foal. It's in the road. And there's boat that floats across the coast.

The cook  stood in the  wood and had a good look. She shook off her hood and began to cook. The cook had a book  which stood on a stool.  The cook hung the book on a big, black hook.  But then it fell down into a brook.

The cook did a loop to fetch the book. But a bird  hooted down as smooth as a spoon.

The cook fell down with her boot  like a shoot.

A groom saw the cook and soon got a broom  to help the cook come out of the pool. The groom put his foot  in the cool water pool and helped the cook in the light of the moon.

 When we eat many peas  we go to sleep.
Clean up each seat while I whip  the cream.

The cat whimpers whether he is under a leaf  or by the stream.

The cat leaps before I grab its whisker.

Which duck has a white beak?  The other duck that whooshed to the east.

 The steam car lost a wheel  by the beach.
 The caterpillar eats a leaf, a peach, a pea, a peanut , a leak  and some cream.

I read a book  while I drink some tea.

The team  cannot play in the heat.

I mean to leap upon the heap.

The scout sat on the couch  while a sprout  came out of the spout.  The scout went round the house  as he ran after the mouse.  He heard  a loud sound when the hound  hit the ground. The scout was about to shout  but the count  hit his mouth  with a trout.  The count had found a pound.  He took the pound in his pouch  which hung onto his blouse.

He was about to go south, when a stout cloud  came out and about. It rained upon the count.

The count crouched into the house

together with the scout  and the hound.

Barbecue Night

Shall we have a barbecue at my house?

You can bring some fuel

and do not argue about that. I will continue to light the barbecue with coal.

Meet me at midnight.

Put on a tie

and bring a quilt

as it might be cold tonight. Can you bring a pie for dessert please? I will die for one right now. I think there will be lightning

high up in the sky. But the stars

will be bright as well

tonight. Be quick and get some light.

We can have a quiz as we boil the liquid

in the pot.

What a fright! I saw mum and she looked like a ghost

in the dark.
